Central decision: Plan teacher deployment using enrolment, workload, subject needs, geography, equity, feasibility, and transparent institutional authority.

Learning outcomes

Why this matters

Mechanical allocation can deepen inequity, ignore local constraints, and treat teachers as interchangeable units.

The analytical workflow is useful only when evidence, uncertainty, authority, and action are connected explicitly. The model supports professional judgement; it does not replace accountable institutional authority.

Worked cross-sector example

A district compares learner demand and subject shortages before proposing feasible teacher reallocation.

Boundary: The example supports learning and review. It does not constitute an official statistic, eligibility determination, enforcement action, clinical judgement, or operational authorization.

Practice and reflection

- 1.
- Add subject-specific shortages.
- 2.
- Use full-time equivalents.
- 3.

- Add housing/transport constraints.
- 4.
- Explain why PTR improvement is not proof of learning impact.

Answer key

- 1.
- Build school-subject-grade requirements and qualification-compatible supply.
- 2.
- Replace headcounts with contracted/available teaching time and document absence assumptions.
- 3.
- Model feasibility and costs without penalizing underserved schools.
- 4.
- Learning depends on pedagogy, attendance, materials, class composition, leadership, and implementation; causal impact needs evaluation.

Operational readiness checklist

- Purpose and decision owner are named.
- Evidence definitions, provenance, and lawful access are documented.
- Uncertainty and abstention are visible.
- Human review, escalation, monitoring, incident response, and retirement are assigned.
- Equity, accessibility, security, and sector-specific approval are complete.
